Learnings in Pandemic

Life is a journey of different ups and downs with sweet memories, sackful of dreams, adventures and complacent achievements. Now we are in the downfall of our life but we soon will climb it up. The terror of coronavirus has scattered everything. An ~~unp~~ unexpected time which no one of us had predicted is the present now. Adapting with new was difficult but we all managed it and now this is how we define normal.

Masks covering the half face and the bottle of sanitizer swinging at the wrist now is the basic outfit. Here, we are so aware that we merely have an evening walk in the nearby area. But sometimes watching the crowd on the news channel, seems like none of the others care about themselves. We all are struggling but we need to ~~coopet~~ cooperate with the situation.

The major effect of the pandemic for me was in my studying pattern. Learning was limited within four walls and had nothing much but to sit on the front of computer's dull screen for the whole day. But slowly I am adapting to it. In this pandemic season I realized that the real talent is to learn ~~to~~ new things in every different and difficult situation and to be innovative. I used to use the internet and PC to entertain myself, but I never thought of using it for study purposes. I always used to spend little time on screen but now, I had to spend it for the entire day. Having continuous exposure on the screen for a long period of time, added spectacles on my eyes.

This pandemic time has made me realise that I am very lucky. My classes are running smoothly and I am having regular online classes. Though I am physically apart from them, I am learning digitally from them. Perhaps, I also realized that not all of us might be as lucky as me, because there are lots of other children who are not getting chance to study. The pandemic has hampered education of many children in Nepal due to lack of a good education system, awareness and poverty. It is said that, "Education is the key to end poverty" but here poverty is disturbing education. No one knows when the terror of coronavirus will end, but we all know the consequences which we need to face after this ends.

John Dewey once said, "All genuine learnings come through experience". This vast situation is also giving us a strong learning. No one had predicted this situation, but now we are suffering through it. This has taught us to never trust any time, as time is never permanent. We should be prepared for every kind of situation.
